AIMS AND OBJECTIVES OF THE PROGRAMME

The overall aim of the programme is to prepare researchers and accomplished professionals in communication, to act as catalysts of development in their work context. This aim will be reached through (a) courses in communication, (b) research skills and (c) a thorough concept of the academic background of professional practice.

The broad aims of the programme are further described through the specific objectives noted below:

- To give the student deep knowledge of the new trends (subject-and research-wise) of the concentration s/he selected.
- To enable the student to plan and bring to closure large-scale research and, therefore, to generate new knowledge and thus contribute to the further development of the sciences in media practice and media education.
- To enable the student to understand the problems associated with advancements in media and communication, deriving from social and technological developments.
- To prepare students to act as agents of change in their work environment.
- To prepare students to undertake and successfully exercise leadership role(s) in the area of their concentration/work environment.

People who successfully complete the doctoral programme will be able to:

- Work as Research Faculty Members in tertiary education institutions.
- Exercise a leadership role in the media, e.g. the industry or the academic world.
- Be appointed as high officials in various departments/services of Ministries associated with the function and contribution of the media to social and cultural development.
- Exercise an administrative and/or supervisory role in public or private institutions of higher education, in research centres or in consulting units.
